

To: Pruitt, Scott[Pruitt.Scott@epa.gov]
From: Rick Onyshko
Sent: Fri 2/24/2017 2:03:33 PM
Subject: Scientific disagreement on Climate change ?

What happens if you are wrong about severity and cause of climate change ? Regardless of veracity of arguments you would have to agree there is some evidence of man caused climate change. If so what happens if you are wrong ?

Can we afford the risk ? If you are correct it will be slower job and economic growth, slower. If you are wrong what do you think the impacts will be?

Thanks

Rick